Have you seen this row of strange drawings – the Dancing Men? Can you guess the message of these dancing men? Have you heard about Sherlock Holmes?

Sherlock Holmes is a detective created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Sir Arthur was a doctor who enjoyed writing detective stories in his spare time. The Dancing Men is the first story of the book. Hilton Cubitt lives in the country with his American wife. One day, he comes to see Sherlock Holmes and shows him some drawings of little men which frightened his wife badly. Holmes thinks they might be some secret messages and tries to work out what they mean. Then Hilton Cubitt is murdered. Holmes must find out what the pictures mean, so that he can catch the killer.

Reading how Holmes and his assistant Watson at work in this and three other exciting mysteries is fun as it gives us a lot of mysteries and to be involved as we read. The charm of Sherlock Holmes can keep us wondering what his next step is and how each case will end. We can make guess throughout the reading.

Let's read and see if we are as smart as Sherlock Holmes.
